Strike talks continue as clock winds down

Manhattan. MTA and LIRR officials spent Wednesday trying to reach a compromise before a looming strike.

After intervention from Gov. Andrew Cuomo, leaders from the Metropolitan Transportation Authority and a coalition of Long Island Rail Road unions met for five hours Wednesday after talks broke down earlier this week.

Representatives for the labor group and the transit authority held the meeting in Midtown after Cuomo rang up both sides asking them to avoid holding Long Islanders "hostage by a strike."

"Both the MTA and the LIRR unions need to put the interests of New Yorkers first by returning to the table today and working continuously to avoid a strike," Cuomo wrote.

The most recent deal from the MTA would offer a 17 percent salary bump over seven years — the unions want it over six. Both reportedly agreed to current employees contributing 2 percent of their salaries to health care.

Moments before stepping into the talks, labor spokesman Anthony Simon said he was prepared for the unfortunate, but was stepping into the room with an open mind.

"If the offer is an offer that we can discuss, that will move the ball forward," he told reporters before the meeting.

After the talks, Simon told reporters that they had made progress on Wednesday.

Representatives from both sides said they plan to meet again on Thursday at 10 a.m. If no agreement is reached, the approximately 5,400 LIRR workers can still strike after the Saturday night deadline.

Changing times

Will tech blunt strike?

If the strike by LIRR workers takes place, thousands will be impacted, especially in jobs that can't telecommute. But the action would cause less trouble than the 1994 LIRR strike because of advances in communication technology.

"Technology has certainly blunted that," said professor Joseph Foudy of the New York University Stern School of Business. REUTERS

Just in case. How to get around if an LIRR strike happens next week

Thousands of Long Island Railroad workers may walk off the job Sunday, causing commuting headaches for more than 300,000 daily riders in need of alternative transportation.

For New Yorkers who rely on the railroad, there are a few ways to get around in case of a strike.

Officials ask that commuters plan ahead and be patient: There will be delays. ANNA SANDERS

For more information

Transportation alternatives can be found at MTA.info/LIRRStrikePlan.

By bus

The MTA will establish a network of 350 school buses to shuttle displaced riders for free with valid tickets. Nassau Inter-County Express buses and New York City Transit buses are also available.

- Shuttle buses will run from eight spots in Nassau and Suffolk counties to three Queens subway stations. Buses will run to the city from 4-7 a.m. and return between 3-7 p.m., depending on the stop.
- NICE buses run to the 179th Street, Jamaica Center, Flushing Main Street and Far Rockaway-Mott Avenue stations.
- Q1/Q2/Q4/Q12/Q13/Q28/Q36/Q85/Q110 MTA buses going to some subway stops connect with LIRR stations.

By subway

Brooklyn and Queens subway lines will be packed with extra commuters.

- The 7, E and A trains will likely have the heaviest ridership, but the MTA said the J/Z, M and R routes are also expected to see more ridership.
- Avoid lines by purchasing $5 and $25 MetroCards early at LIRR stations.

By ferry

Details are still pending, but the MTA will set up a free ferry during a strike.

- The free ferry will run between Glen Gove and East 34th Street in Manhattan for LIRR riders with valid tickets.

$3.50

A $3.50 ferry also operates from Rockaway to Wall Street.

By car

The MTA said traveling into Manhattan by car will be "virtually impossible." To avoid traffic, LIRR riders can carpool or use the subway.

- Park and ride the subway at Citi Field and Aqueduct Race Rack.
- Designated ride shares have also been set up. Visit 511ny.org/rideshare.

De Blasio wants makeover for Brooklyn's core

Downtown. The mayor's proposal would create more public space.

An expansion of a 21-acre greenway is part of a proposal announced by Mayor Bill de Blasio on Wednesday to revitalize Downtown Brooklyn.

The proposal would also allow for retail stores on the first floors of some city buildings in the neighborhood, as well as more public spaces.

The area was rezoned 10 years ago to facilitate residential development as well as establish an alternative business district in the wake of 9/11. Since then, the neighborhood has attracted more than $4 billion in private investment with more than 5,000 new residential units and 1,100 hotel rooms, according to a report released this week by the Downtown Brooklyn Partnership.

Several thousand more residential units are in the works, but de Blasio and other officials aim to make Downtown Brooklyn a more "dynamic" neighborhood.

Under the proposal, the city would create a "Brooklyn Strand" greenway, connecting several existing parks and public spaces from the courthouses to the waterfront. The city is also working with locals to make some streets in the area safer for pedestrians, including Jay and Willoughby streets.

Construction will begin this summer at the intersection of Flatbush Avenue and Fulton Street to create Fox Square. The city is also moving toward building a new 1-acre public space dubbed Willoughby Square, to be completed by the end of 2016.

Police search for rapist

A Manhattan woman is recovering Wednesday after a man pushed himself into her apartment and assaulted her.

The woman was in her Washington Heights apartment when she answered the door at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The suspect allegedly forced himself on the victim, 20, and raped her before fleeing.

Authorities said the man had been inside the apartment building earlier and followed the woman into the elevator to her floor but not to her unit.

Video showed the man to be a Hispanic male between 20 to 25 years old, approximately 6-foot-9, last seen wearing black pants and a shirt with stripes.

Rogue ATV leads cops to hidden stash of drugs and guns

Brooklyn. A call about an ATV led cops to a much bigger discovery.

Charges

Noel Tavarez, 26, Pablo Soto, 21, and Edwin Rodriguez, 22, were arrested and charged with four counts each of criminal possession of a controlled substance and criminal possession of a weapon.

- The younger Soto faces seven charges, including reckless endangerment and fleeing an officer.

A teen revving an ATV through a Brooklyn sidewalk over the weekend led police to discover a large cache of drugs, cash, guns and more ATVs — and led to the arrests of four men.

Complaints came in about a person recklessly riding an ATV on a sidewalk near the Brooklyn Navy Yard at 8:30 p.m. on Saturday.

A manager at the Lockaway Self Storage, not far from where the ATV chased people off the sidewalk, called authorities the next day on men in one of the units. Police obtained a warrant to search the storage unit on Monday.

Once inside, investigators found 14 ATVs and dirt bikes, as well as four loaded firearms.

Unknown to the police, an officer on his way to the scene found Joel Soto, 19, of Brooklyn on an ATV on a nearby sidewalk. Soto fled, but the officer apprehended him.

A subsequent warrant then led officers to another suspect's car, where they found a secret compartment containing 500 glassines of heroin and $8,000.

When is enough enough?

The LIRR Strike by the numbers:

Unionized Long Island Rail Road workers are the best paid in the nation. On average they make $87,000 a year – that's 56% more than the average Long Islander.

The MTA has offered to up their pay 17%, limit their healthcare contributions to 2%, and continue their already generous pensions. And we found a way to pay for it without raising fares or jeopardizing our long-term capital program by asking for modest changes for workers who haven't even been hired yet.

So current employees would get everything that they asked for, new employees would still be the best paid railroad employees in the nation, and all workers would still have great benefits and secure pensions.

Even with all of this, the union leadership is still threatening to take the 5,400 unionized LIRR workers on strike, stranding 300,000 riders and causing massive disruption to families and businesses across Long Island.

Is this worth a strike? To get all the facts, go to mta.info.

Deaf, mute rider attacked on F train

A deaf and mute subway rider was beaten during a seemingly random attack on an F train last week in Brooklyn, police said. The 44-year-old man was riding the southbound train around 4:07 p.m. on July 7 when another man struck him numerous times in the face, according to the NYPD. The attack continued until the victim got off the subway at the 18th Avenue station. Investigators believe the attack was unprovoked, police said. There's no indication the suspect and victim knew each other. ANNA SANDERS

NYC. City reminds on paid sick leave law

Starting July 30, New Yorkers can use accrued paid sick days provided by a law swept into place by the de Blasio administration earlier this year.

Lawmakers and volunteers across the five boroughs spent Wednesday reminding New Yorkers about the law.

De Blasio donned a yellow T-shirt emblazoned with the hashtag "#paidsickleave" as he and Department of Consumer Affairs Commissioner Julie Menin — whose agency will administer the law — passed out fliers to commuters at the Atlantic Avenue subway station.

"We don't want to have a situation where people have to choose between their health and the ability to put food on the table for their families," de Blasio said.

City Council members similarly visited local subway stops to pass out pamphlets.

What it means

Any New Yorker not eligible for paid sick leave who works more than 80 hours at a business with five or more employees can earn one hour of paid sick time for every 30 hours worked.

- That means one can earn up to 40 hours of sick time every year to care for themselves or a family member.

Apple agrees to pay $450 million after e-book antitrust suit

New York. Apple was found liable in 2013 for colluding with publishers to impede e-book competitors.

Earlier settlement

Apple Inc. has agreed to pay $450 million to resolve state and consumer claims the iPad manufacturer conspired with five major publishers to fix e-book prices, according to court records filed Wednesday.

The settlement, which would provide $400 million for consumers, is conditioned on the outcome of a pending appeal of a New York federal judge's ruling last year that Apple was liable for violating antitrust laws.

A ruling by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York reversing the judge could, under the settlement, either reduce the amount Apple pays to $70 million, with $50 million for consumers, or eliminate payments altogether.

"While we cannot predict the outcome of the appeal with certainty, we are confident in the case we made against Apple at trial," Connecticut Attorney General George Jepsen said in a statement.

The settlement, which requires approval of U.S. District Judge Denise Cote, had been announced in June. Terms were not disclosed at the time. REUTERS

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

CNN=POLITICS

If there is one thing that can turn Republicans into whirling furies these days, it is the Supreme Court. The mere notion of another ruling from those do-gooder, elitist activists is enough to send GOPers spinning down the mall like so many Tasmanian devils.

Oh, wait. I mean the Democrats. That's who is enraged at the Supreme Court now.

It's hard to keep track, because as much as both sides praise the court and say they respect it one moment, the very next they order SCOTUS piñatas for their summer soirees.

Gallup released a new poll this week showing that ever since the Hobby Lobby ruling propped up conservative notions about bosses, contraception and who foots the bill, Republicans have been feeling better about the court.

Their approval for the black-robed gang has risen 21 points since last September to just over 51 percent now.

Democrats? Not so much. Oh, sure, they loved the court after the favorable Obamacare ruling in 2012. Back then, 68 percent of Dems approved. But this year, the court has wailed on the Obama White House, time and again spiking its policies. Now just 44 percent of Dems approve.

I tend to think this is all a bad sign. Sure, political parties can be expected to oppose each other vigorously, just like all those soccer teams did at the World Cup.

But blaming the referees for a loss, absent indisputable evidence of malfeasance, is the refuge of cowards and scoundrels.

Certainly, the Supreme Court makes mistakes, just as we all do. But those mistakes can really be determined only in the context of history.

OMG! Stick-on knobs turn your tablet into a DJ mix workstation

Watch out, David Guetta: these stick-on knobs will turn any tablet-toting person into a bona fide DJ. Tuna Knobs are suction-cup dials that can attach to a touchscreen and control your tablet like a DJ workstation. Dutch creator Samuel Verburg came up with the idea while interning at the Rotterdam-based design company Tweetonig. "We loved Tuna and worked for about four months to make a real product, ready for mass production," explains John Tillema, product developer at Tweetonig. Compatible with iOS, Android or Windows devices, the prices of Tuna Knobs vary from $12 for a single knob to $115 for a set of 10 when they're out before Christmas. Metro spoke with Tillema.

Visit us online at Metro.us/omg for more interviews.

How did the idea of Tuna Knobs come about?
While playing with all those DJ and MIDI controller apps on the iPad, Samuel missed the feeling of his "old" controllers — that nice feeling of how a small twist would really control the music, even with your eyes closed. And so, the idea of a knob for digital touchscreen devices was born. He came to us at Tweetonig and we started working together.

What's the appeal?
Well, the best part is that it can be used on any mobile device. People will be using it on top of their favorite apps. You can best compare it with a stylus for drawing or writing. You could do it with your fingers, but it is unprecise. The main advantage is getting tactile feedback on a tablet.

Fight nature with nature

Mosquitoes.
Keep bugs away without chemicals.

Yes, they're a bummer on an otherwise perfect summer day. But mosquitoes can also carry diseases, including the West Nile virus, which was just detected in New York City this week. With 170 mosquito species in North America alone, you should be slathering on repellent before your night out like you apply sunscreen in the morning. But not all repellents are created equal. Look for ones that contain the least amount of DEET, a common active ingredient that should be washed off after you return home. Try one of these affordable natural products made with essential oils.

Guinea pig. A single newspaper man reluctantly agreed to meet with a romantic advisor to help him date in real life, not just online.

I'm at a Lower East Side former-speakeasy on a modest weekday night getting schooled by Jared Sais, a professional dating coach. Sais is teaching me in the ways of what was once a very common — and to some, like me, cripplingly terrifying — social convention: trying to pick up complete strangers in public places rather than do so online.

The Internet allegedly made this much easier. Various apps (Tinder, Grindr, whatever you like) break the ice for us. If we don't go that route, we can simply woo people with our online personalities, which may be funnier, smarter, more charming and less prone to unsightly nervous tics than our vastly disappointing in-person selves. But that doesn't always work. And so I'm trying it old school, just for a lark.

From birth to age 4, Sais was deaf, and only gained his hearing after some miraculous experiments. This period gave him an unusually strong gift for reading body language. He decided he'd use this skill for a noble cause: He goes out with people who require romantic advising and steers them through the thing that probably frightens them more than dying.

But he's no mere Hitch, the "date doctor" once essayed on film by Will Smith. And he's not about sex. He boasts, with a huge grin, that three of his clients have gotten married this year. There's an inevitable dude-ness to some of his techniques, but they can all — or at least most — be applied to any gender or sexual preference.

Also, stick with two drinks, tops. This seems wise.

So here we go.

ATEMPT ONE

One of the first girls I'm instructed to hit on ignores me completely. That's not true: She glances up, just enough to let out a knowing I'm-being-hit-on chuckle, then returns to her friends.

LESSON

This is not the end of the world. I've been advised to develop a "f— it" attitude. The same impulse that should get me to approach complete strangers in bars is the same one that has me rebounding when I've been unceremoniously shot down. So I walk back to where I was and don't let it get me down.

ATEMPT TWO

I go up to a girl sitting with a friend at a bar. We talk about the ginger cocktail she's nursing. I leave, but later return. We already have a rapport based on the drink. Before she leaves I fumble a last second chat.

LESSON

Sais preaches the power of "little jabs." You don't run up to a potential mark and instantly perish with an unfortunate line. You exchange glances. Then you make initial, friendly contact. Maybe around the third or fourth meeting, you try for something a little more serious — but not that serious. A number works.

ATEMPT THREE

Sais and I start talking to two girls and a guy sitting near us. We just chit-chat and we quickly suss out that all three are married, two to each other. No bother: We keep on talking, just for fun.

LESSON

This shouldn't be just about getting numbers. It should be about meeting people, learning about them, sharing a few laughs. It pushes whatever romantic motives you may have to the back of the mind, therefore making it easier to find someone you may actually like. Loosened up, you may actually make a real connection.

ATEMPT FOUR

For most of the night, there's been a group of girls behind us. They get up to leave, but Sais flags them down. The next thing I know, he's a few feet away and I'm speaking to three French girls.

LESSON

Sais often compares humans to animals, and he talks about how hyenas often break up into packs. This makes conversation easier. And it should be about conversation: As I speak, the words are just flowing out of me. I'm not trying to hit on them or even get their numbers, even if that's in the back of my mind.

The realization

L'AMOUR!

Luckily, one of the French girls addresses the elephant in the room (because they're not American, or at least not me): "Why didn't you come over earlier?" she asks. Without getting nervous, I make a lightly self-deprecating joke about slow Americans. They like this and we continue chatting. Eventually they do leave, as intended, and I realize too late that I could have gotten their numbers but am OK that I didn't. And then I realize I have no idea who I am anymore.

Tips

Body language

Sais, who is CEO of the Non-Verbal Game, says it's possible for you to hit on anyone, anywhere, as long as you follow these tips:

1 Grin and bear it: Sais says the first step to flirting with a stranger is to make eye contact and smile. If they're reading a book or looking at their phone, walk over and say hello.

2 Count: Watch how long the other person holds eye contact: You're golden if it lasts for two seconds.

3 Approach naturally: "Don't use lines," says Sais. Instead, he suggests walking up to your crush and simply saying hello. "If you're shy, you can use that as your strength," he says. "'Hey, I really don't do this a lot and I'm kind of shy, but I had to approach you and get your number,' – that's a natural way for success."

Why it's harder than ever to find satisfaction in marriage

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

The new television series "Satisfaction" on USA is taking a bold stance on marriage, monogamy and infidelity by calling out these critical issues. A successful couple with a teenage daughter has silently entered the doldrums of their marriage. As so often happens, they don't talk about it. Instead, they each look externally for a sense of satisfaction.

The show got me thinking about monogamy and marriage and also raised an important question: What if the having it all outside isn't enough to feel fulfilled inside?

Dissatisfaction drives satisfaction

In a marriage where a couple is drifting apart, it's all but preordained that any couple will stray physically and emotionally.

It happens silently

Over time, life can enter a place of habit for many couples, and that's when things can get dreary.

I recently polled just over 1,000 women – more than two-thirds of whom are in long-term relationships – and asked a very straightforward question: What do women want in bed? In analyzing the responses, a whopping 92 percent answered that the most important thing – ranked higher than foreplay and oral sex – is a kiss. Not just any kiss – a real kiss filled with passion.

Here, we can see what so many women are missing – passion and desire. They don't want to leave their marriages, but they aren't willing to put their wants and needs on hold either.

A recipe for disconnection

Long-term relationships suffer from one main issue: predictability. Comfort and routine can make people forget why they fell in love.

The solution is showing gratitude. The bottom line: No matter how much someone loves you, everyone has a breaking point. And that's when you'll find they've fallen into the arms of someone else.

‘Of Mice and Men’

1 James Franco decided to try his hand at Broadway, and the results are actually OK. Chris O’Dowd is heartbreaking as the mentally challenged Lenny, leaving Broadway newcomer Franco with very little heavy lifting. “Of Mice and Men” also stars Leighton Meester and closes July 27. www.ofmiceandmenonbroadway.com

‘Heathers’

2 “Heathers” is a new musical based on the 1980s film. It retains all of the dated terribleness that made the movie a cult classic, but also breathes new life into the original “mean girls.” Buy your ticket before Aug. 4. www.heathersthemusical.com

Visit Metro.us to read reviews of these shows and pick which to see.

‘Holler if Ya Hear Me’

3 This new musical just hit Broadway this summer. Unfortunately, the world was not yet ready for a Tupac musical, and the show ends July 20. www.hollerifyahearme.com

‘Rocky’

4 Many were doubtful about bringing Sylvester Stallone’s hit to Broadway — as a musical, no less. But the skeptics were largely silenced when they saw the innovative set with a life-size boxing ring that brings the Italian Stallion’s big championship match right out into the audience. Get a good seat up front and form your own opinion before Aug. 17. www.rockybroadway.com

Stranger in the night

Music. As a singer, Robert Davi isn't half as bad as the guys he plays in the movies.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.lu

Robert Davi can be pretty convincing when he wants to be. So the venerable '80s action movie mainstay is more than up to the task of explaining why you should make the trip out to Long Island's Eisenhower Park this Saturday to hear him impersonate Frank Sinatra — as he's done plenty of times before, to surprisingly large crowds. Take it away, Mr. Davi.

He knows you recognize him from somewhere: "They don't know exactly where. If you're a Bond fan, it's 'License to Kill.' 'Goonies,' 'Die Hard,' 'Showgirls,' 'Cops and Robbersons,' on and on and on, different genre pictures. I also had a TV series, 'Profiler.' That was another thing — four and a half years of doing the good-guy thing."

These concerts are pretty popular: "Last year I had 10,000 people. And the album went to No. 6 on Billboard Jazz, so it did have, you know, awareness."

He knows the difference between humility and modesty: "I'm not modest at all. Humility is great, that's something you work at. But modesty, that's something else. What is it, being modest? I don't know. With all that white noise out there, how the hell do you break through? That's why Miley Cyrus does that twerky tongue thing. But I say talent still wins out, and class and elegance. Because it's not of the moment, it has longevity. I'm not saying it's the reason why, but when I did my album in 2011 there was a billboard on Sunset Boulevard for months of me in a suit and tie. Now, what did Jay Z and Justin Timberlake do a year and a half later? Not that I'm saying this, but I kind of brought it back. It had a striking image. I'm not saying that I necessarily had that effect, but it's curious to me."

Back in 1989, Davi (with iguana) was the Bond villain of "License to Kill." / MGM/UA

Despite all the film and TV work, he was always meant to be a singer: "Had you asked anyone in my family when I was growing up what I was going to do, they would say, 'He's going to sing.' Whether it was the opera or the American songbook or Broadway or something to that effect, I was going to be a singer. It's kind of a funny term, but I feel like I've been let out of prison in a certain way, because you express yourself fully through music. There's nothing more intimate or higher than that kind of communication on a mass level."

Breaking legs

Ol' blue eyes

Because he's qualified to take up Sinatra's tough guy persona: "There was one other singer in history who if he said, 'I'm going to break your legs,' you would believe him, and that was Frank Sinatra, who I did a film with [ed. 1977's "Contract on Cherry Street"]. I think if I say that, people believe that. I love Michael Buble, but if he said, 'I'm going to break your legs,' I wouldn't believe him. I ain't going to buy it, sorry. He's wonderful, but I ain't going to buy that."

4 Ways 'The Purge: Anarchy' is smart

The second "Purge" features a whole new line of scary masks. / UNIVERSAL PICTURES

Satirical thriller. The sequel to last year's surprise hit didn't have to try, but it did anyway.

1 It has a real message. The titular event in "The Purge" movies refers to an annual tradition in a near-future America in which all crimes, notably murder, are legal for 12 hours. The idea is that the populace gets the worst instincts out of their system once a year. Sure enough, crime rates have gone down. But this claim might actually be bull. As suggested in the first and shown in the second, the ones being killed tend to be homeless or underprivileged.

2 It goes deeper. Where "The Purge" took place in suburbia, "Anarchy" heads to the city, where we see how the most vulnerable — i.e., the most poor — struggle through the holiday to survive. Our heroes are a motley crew thrown together by circumstance, forced to work together to survive the streets. They include a waitress (Carmen Ejogo) and her daughter (Zoe Soul), a young couple (Kiele Sanchez and Zach Gilford) whose car broke down and an armed-to-the-teeth (but not really scary) stranger (Frank Grillo) who actually intends to use the day to avenge his murdered son. We see more of how the extremely wealthy spend the day, not just hiding behind expensive gates but buying people to kill for fun. The whole cast is new, including a revolutionary (Michael K. Williams) who spreads dissent about the Purge, aiming to take down the right-wing government that implemented it.

'The Purge: Anarchy'

Director: James DeMonaco

Stars: Frank Grillo, Carmen Ejogo

Rating: R

3 It's a decent genre film. "The Purge" was a home invasion picture. This is a survive-the-streets thriller — like "The Warriors," "Judgment Night" or "After Hours" — and it's a not bad one. Our heroes are stuck on streets swarming with homicidal maniacs and gangs of masked monsters, and only one has any skill with a gun. There are booby traps and all different kinds of villains. Although he's not necessarily the most inventive horror auteur, returning writer-director James DeMonaco is skilled at continually raising the bar.

4 It at least attempts to appease both sides. Shockingly, the first "Purge" went all the way with its critique of blood lust, even denying viewers the chance to see all the baddies gorily vanquished. This one indulges that desire a little bit more. Grillo's hopeful-avenger is handy with dispatching baddies, and there's even a scene where we're fully nudged to cheer as our heroes turn the tables on a legion of would-be assassins. Ejogo and Soul's characters are on-hand as the resident killjoy pacifists, forever begging Grillo to not give in to vengeance. But "Anarchy" only sides with that pair to a point, giving into presupposed audience demands at the expense of a more nuanced message.

Wishing you were anywhere but 'Here'

In "Wish I Was Here," Zach Braff's daughter (Joey King) has a pink wig. / MERIE WEISMILLER WALLACE, SMPSP

Back in action. Zach Braff's latest will make fans and haters different kinds of crazy.

It took him 10 years and an over-exposed Kickstarter campaign, but Zach Braff finally wrote, directed and starred in a follow-up to "Garden State." He again plays a struggling actor looking for happiness, but this time he's married (to Kate Hudson) and his dad (Mandy Patinkin) is dying.

The downside

"Garden State" has legions of ardent fans — but it has as many detractors. The haters berated its mega-quirkiness and over-earnestness, as well as the way Braff, in the lead, ended every sentence with a question mark. (It was profoundly annoying?) Although the movie was genuinely amusing, it was often ruined by bad gags and cloying sentiment.

The same thing happens in "Wish I Was Here." But this movie also suffers from sophomore syndrome, which often occurs when an artist feels burdened by the work they're putting out following a hit debut: It's over-packed yet under-organized; it's both arrogant and sincere in its ambition. Braff can't settle on a main storyline, so he fumbles with many, including one about badly home-schooled kids (that he luckily winds up forgetting about). As in "Garden State," the tone veers drunkenly between gags — some amusing, others chokingly whimsical — and unsightly corniness, marked by Braff's expected soundtrack of sad-yet-inspiring songs he just can't wait for you to hear.

The upside

The thread detailing Patinkin dying is actually genuinely moving, and not because of the wishy-washy faith talk that finds Braff's character, a religious skeptic, chatting with rabbis. It's because of the hard line it takes on death. Patinkin plays a proud man buried under an endless beard who calmly rattles off withering appraisals of his son's poor life choices. But as his voice weakens, you sense a man afraid of having lived a poor life himself and hoping only to leave it on a high note. These scenes, usually (but not always) underplayed, stare death in the face; they don't get tied up in vague religious chatter, they just confront life's disappointments head-on. It's too bad the rest of the film doesn't.

Indie spotlight. Michel Gondry goes home and scientists rule

'Mood Indigo'

One of the many little toys Audrey Tautou and Romain Duris get to play with in Michel Gondry's "Mood Indigo" is some kind of box car. / DRAFTHOUSE FILMS

What: Film and music video director Michel Gondry goes home to France to make this whimsical adaptation of Boris Vian's whimsical novel about a playboy (Romain Duris) in love with a woman (Audrey Tautou) who is dying because she has a water lily stuck in her lung.

The lowdown: Vian's book — and Gondry's movie — may start out almost unbearably quirky, and may include things like a bird DJ and a car made of plastic clouds. But things get weirdly serious. The lily in Tautou's lung is no joke, and the tone goes from freewheeling to not just sad but actively depressing. The loud colors start to drain from the picture, and what seemed a perhaps busy nightmare of pure, manic joy has turned into an actual nightmare.

This isn't shocking. Gondry's work has always bounced between happiness and despair — not just in the frankly honest "Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind," but in music videos, where the fantasies onscreen tend to be revealed as tragically impossible or borne out of anxiety and pain. Vian's novel fits him like a glove; no shock that it was a major inspiration on his style when he was young. Sneaky as it is, "Indigo" ultimately reminds you that he's at his best when collaborating with people — Charlie Kaufman, the inhabitants of Brooklyn in "Dave Chappelle's Block Party" — that coax him out of his shell.

Michael Pitt and Astrid Berges-Frisbey are in love in "I Origins." / FOCUS FEATURES

'I Origins'

What: "Another Earth" director and star Mike Cahill and Brit Marling reunite for more lo-fi sci-fi, this one about a molecular biologist (Michael Pitt) whose research into the evolution of the eye yields some earth-shattering discoveries.

The lowdown: Where "Another Earth" got so bogged down in personal drama it forgot about its crazy sci-fi premise, "I Origins" hunkers down with actual scientists. It portrays them positively: Pitt and lab partner Marling are not hubristic monsters but flesh and blood people who love discovery (and have actual sex drives). Even as the story heads into supernatural territory, it stays scientific. But its look at the war between provable facts and vague spirituality is deeply frustrating, and the ending is pointlessly ambiguous.

The people hounding Taylor Swift in this photo are not the same ones who hounded her at her vacation home.

Even Taylor Swift's haters are square

Thanks to court documents, we can finally put some names and faces to the three Connecticut residents charged with vandalizing Taylor Swift's Rhode Island vacation home, and the results are kind of brainy. Michael Horrigan, 29, Tristan Kading, 28, and Emily Kading, 26, pleaded not guilty to charges they hurled beer bottles and shouted expletives at security guards monitoring Swift's property last month, according to TMZ. So what do they do when they're not drunkenly defacing property? Tristan Kading, for one, studied chemical oceanography at MIT and received the Richard Montgomery Award for Achievement in Mathematics. Younger sister Emily is studying to be a nuclear physicist, and both Tristan and Horrigan were given citations for heroism last year after rescuing a 12-year-old girl from a capsized canoe. Leave it to Swift to attract the nicest, smartest delinquents you could hope for. The defendants, by the way, say they "harbored no ill will toward Swift," who wasn't home at the time.

Broderick and Parker go to Ireland to argue

You know what everyone loves on a vacation? "Intense discussions." Aren't they the best? And apparently that's what Matthew Broderick and Sarah Jessica Parker have been having while visiting Ireland. According to the National Enquirer, Broderick and Parker headed to their usual holiday spot on the Emerald Isle specifically to address their marriage woes and what we'll charitably refer to as his wandering eye. "They normally venture all around Donegal, but this time they spent the majority of their time locked away in their remote home out in the countryside," a source says. "One evening they went into Nancy's, a seafood restaurant, and hardly said a word to each other." That sounds so much like the opposite of fun. But hey, at least they're not stewing silently over dinner at home! There's that, at least.

DOING THIS IN IRELAND ... OR MAYBE NOT.

Bieber to give another deposition

It's too bad Justin Bieber had such a terrible time during his last videotaped deposition in connection with his paparazzi assault case, because the Canadian pop star is going to have to do it all over again. A judge has ordered Bieber back for further interrogation due to his refusal to answer questions related to on-again, off-again girlfriend Selena Gomez, according to TMZ. Bieber will be questioned by the same lawyer who riled him so back in March, prompting the repeated response of "Don't ask me about her again" when questioned about Gomez. "He will have to answer questions he refused to answer last time," a source says. And the second go-round will be videotaped again, so we have that to look forward to.

Beauty. Get a sunless summer glow without any pesky white spots or orange streaks.

5 Steps to a perfect spray tan

Slather on the sunscreen and keep your tans sunless. / WAVEBREAK MEDIA

Whether you're going glam for your big day or a special night out, or just want a glow for the beach, there are spray tan commandments you must follow. Break them and risk streaky hands or a stained once-white dress, warns Ashley Piotrowski, owner of The Bronzed Bee in Philadelphia.

Piotrowski's clients, especially summer brides, come to her for meticulously applied airbrush spray tans, but all of her hard work will — literally — fade away if you don't stick to these rules.

RACHEL VIGODA
@rachelatmetro
rachel.vigoda@metro.us

Follow these tips:

1 Go for a trial run first

"A bride can come in the night before her wedding and get an airbrush tan thinking it's going to be one thing — and it comes out another," Piotrowski says. She recommends spray tan newbies try it out about a month before a big event such as a wedding, bachelorette party or vacation to avoid horrific surprises.

2 48 hours to perfection

"Come in two days prior to your wedding and no sooner," Piotrowski cautions. You'll need to avoid water during the 6 to 8 hours the tan is developing — which means no showering. "The day before is your rehearsal dinner, so you'll be running around sweating," she says. "You're going to want to shower that day."

3 Keep it light

Piotrowski says to "ask for a glow": "If you tell me you want to be super dark, like you just got back from Jamaica, I'll deliver — but you might not be happy with it." No matter how dark you go, the color is there for about a week; opting for a Tan Mom look won't make it last longer.

4 Amend your mistakes

Keep a small bottle of touch-up solution at home, such as Sun Labs' Self Tanning Micro Mist, for when you accidentally wash your hands before the color has set. If you absolutely must clean your hands, Piotrowski recommends using hand sanitizer on just your palms.

5 Powder, powder, powder

"I don't care if it's Christmastime, you're going to be sweating on your wedding day," Piotrowski says. Sweat can make a tan run or leave a telltale sign on a white dress. Keep moisture at bay, no matter what you're wearing, with liberal doses of baby powder.

Self-tanners to the rescue

If it seems like every sunny day is spent stuck in the office, fake a beach vacay with these trusty at-home tanners. METRO

Hot Chef. Tribeca's classy comfort food spot, Washington Market Tavern, opens tonight.

If it's not in season, it's not on Aksel Theilkuhl's menu.

The 30-year-old executive chef of Washington Market Tavern (41 Murray St., www.washingtonmarkettavern.com), which opens tonight, goes by an "extremely seasonal" ethos for his American menu. Shareable plates and updated tavern classics will bear a sophisticated touch — the product of following Laurent Tourondel through the kitchens of BLT as it expanded on the East Coast and Chicago, learning the techniques of French cooking along the way.

We chatted with Theilkuhl to find out what he has in store for Tribeca.

Doing it right

"If we're gonna poach a carrot, [the staff] spend an entire day just talking about the correct way to do it to get that perfect — we've allowed all the sugars to come out so it can be at its optimum flavor. I think that a lot of chefs go wrong sometimes because they tend to overcomplicate their dishes instead of focusing on cooking the product right."

Themed menus

"We're getting beautiful spring carrots from Blooming Hill Farm. We're doing an entire dish driven just on carrots, then the carrots are finding their way into a few other dishes — a halibut dish, even to make our stock. We definitely use a product in as many places as we can."

Disney lessons

"I was pretty much still technically in culinary school. The chef that worked [at Disney World's California Grill], he was very market-driven and he kinda started to show me what the importance is of sourcing; that at the end of the day what we do is a craft and an art, but it all starts with the product. So that's what really started to stem the mentality of, 'We're not changing the world, we're just taking a beautiful product and putting it on display.' "

Aksel Theilkuhl will serve updated tavern classics. / PROVIDED

Four seasons

Always changing

"[The menu will] have four major transitions, but even in-between that there'll be a few dishes that change throughout the weeks and maybe even every couple of days. Maybe for two or three weeks we might have this particular vegetable available to us from whichever farm, and then they might not have it anymore. Then they might approach us with something new, and then we'll make adjustments to the menu based on that."

Summer lovin'

"Morel mushrooms are like the pride and joy for me for the summer and spring, a big highlight on our menu. We actually have an entire dish just based on morels. Probably one of my favorite ingredients in general, as well as spring garlic, fava beans and all the shell beans."

National Ice Cream Month. At least your mouth can stay cool.

For once, the powers that be got it right, declaring July National Ice Cream Month. We rounded up some of the city's unique frozen treats, including gelato and shaved ice in deference to the ongoing swimsuit season.

Crave.it

Selvaggia Pizzetti, a Rome émigré to NYC, just opened Crave.it, a modern Italian bakery and café in Chelsea, with a roster of 18 seasonal gelatos like peaches and saffron in rotation. Try them with a piece of caramella di acciughe — an anchovy-caramel candy from the Emilia Romagna region. 545 Sixth Ave.

Bubby's

The comfort food mainstay's second location in the Meatpacking District recently added a soda fountain, serving old-fashioned sundaes, floats and malts to take on your High Line stroll. If you prefer your frozen fare lighter, chef Ron Silver just returned from a Snowball research trip to Japan (they invented it!), so check out the cart serving Asian-style shaved ice drizzled with housemade syrups. 120 Hudson St.

Crolato

Asellina Ristorante

The Gansevoort Park Hotel eatery gets into the Cronut-inspired dessert business with the Crolato, a small open-faced croissant with a scoop of housemade gelato. Grab one for $5 from the outdoor cart, with flavors including Italian pistachio and Nutella. 420 Park Ave. S.

Carmine's

If you want to have an answer ready the next time someone wonders what sank the Titanic, you can take credit. Carmine's Titanic sundae is the same family style affair as its main courses, with five scoops of ice cream covering a gluten-free chocolate torte. "Berry-More" Champagne Float

There are ice cream-themed treats at all Loews hotels throughout July (NYC's Regency has a trio of ice cream sandwiches), and here's a cocktail straight out of Hollywood. Executive chef Mark Ching decided to include all the best summer treats in one glass with a cocktail that pays homage to Tinseltown's Golden Age and the Barrymore family dynasty.

"BERRY-MORE" CHAMPAGNE FLOAT / PROVIDED

Ingredients:
- 3 oz. strawberry ice cream
- 4 oz. California sparkling white wine
- 1 strawberry, hullled & halved
- ½ tsp. balsamic syrup
- Pinch of black pepper
- Basil leaf

Directions:
Scoop ice cream into a martini glass. Arrange the halved strawberry on top. Drizzle with the syrup; grind fresh pepper on top. Gently float the wine into the glass and serve.

NYC Restaurant Week

Make room for all the places your wallet isn't fat enough for. The inaccurately named NYC Restaurant Week — it goes from July 21 through Aug. 15 — is back, with more than 300 eateries offering set three-course menus at $25 for lunch and $38 dinner. The deals are available Monday through Friday, and on Sunday at select restaurants. New to the event are Greenhouse Cafe and Tanoreen in Bay Ridge, Minton's in Harlem, Murray's Cheese Bar in Greenwich Village and Nolita's Socarrat Paella Bar. To the dismay of waiters everywhere, an Instagram contest is offering 16 prizes of $250 gift cards for the best foodie posts tagged #NYCRestaurantWeek. www.nycgo.com /restaurantweek.

élan

The late great Chanterelle's David Waltuck (and his famous seafood sausage!) have returned at élan, a contemporary American restaurant in Gramercy. The food is rich — think lamb with divine moussaka and scallops in fettuccini with duck fat, which makes another appearance in an unexpected side dish: hash browns. But it's also eminently affordable at $15-$32 for main courses. Expect informed but relaxed service in a classy space, and save room for the amaretto cake with sorbet duo.

Deltron 3030. In the distant future, hip-hop's backing track will be a classical orchestra

Deltron 3030 at Celebrate Brooklyn!

Saturday, 7:30 p.m.
Prospect Park Bandshell
Free, www.bricartsmedia.org

Hip-hop meets classical music? You know it's Brooklyn.

Alternative rap collective Deltron 3030 — made up of MC Del the Funky Homosapien, producer Dan "the Automator" Nakamura and DJ Kid Koala — are bringing their "Event 2" tour to Celebrate Brooklyn! in Prospect Park.

Jumping ahead by a decade after their first album, "Event 2" takes place in the year 3040. In their imagined dystopian future, Del's alter ego, Deltron Zero, battles big business, which has taken over the world.

For frontman Del, New York is going to be a special performance. Despite the gentrification of Brooklyn, which now boasts more hipsters than rappers, he expects that people will embrace the return of Deltron 3030. "I would assume that those who come to the concert, they're already on our page. If not, they can just zone out on the sci-fi of it."

Their afrofuturistic music is the brainchild of Nakamura and Kid Koala, who add the genre-bending effects to their distinct sound. For this tour, Nakamura, a classically trained violinist, assembled the 3030 Orchestra to accompany Del's rhymes. "It's a dream that he wanted to realize," said Del. "And I believe he picked the right combination of people." SAMAR KHURSHID

Horoscope

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. Hold on to your assets and avoid lending money or possessions. Be firm with friends who make unreasonable requests or demands.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. This is not a good time to lock yourself into a long-term agreement. Find out all the details before you make a promise.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. To keep harmony in your business or personal relationships, you must be willing to compromise. Treat others' beliefs with respect and listen attentively.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Don't take chances. You have to spend your time wisely to avoid burning out. Only take on what you can handle.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. It may seem as though everything you desire is right in front of you. Set a limit before you buy something unnecessary.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Show your friends how much you appreciate them. Offer to do something that you know will make life easier for those you love.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Do whatever it takes to make a move that will put you into a higher earning bracket. A successful interview can pave the way to a better position.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Consider making changes at home that will make your life easier. You don't have to spend a lot to make your place inviting.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Consider trying out for a leadership position. You'll be recognized as a person who can help those in need.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Don't let anyone push you around. If you don't speak up now, you are likely to end up in a compromising position on a regular basis.

Use the gun laws we have

Re: 'No need to suffer gun violence' (Metro, July 16) Those people who naively think that gun violence can be legislated out of existence are living in a dream world. There are probably over 30,000 gun laws already on the books that impose restrictions on law-abiding individuals. If someone chooses to disobey the laws, no legislation is going to prevent that. When someone purchases a gun through a licensed dealer, he or she has to pass a background check and that firearm is registered to the buyer. Those who are barred from possessing guns legally will obtain them through other means. They will steal guns, buy them on the street or devise ways to make their own. Even though there are laws against drunken driving, people still drive drunk.

CHUCK FAZIO, VIA EMAIL

The gun lobby that letter writer Carol Sosenko laments is strong because millions of registered voters support OUR rights to keep and bear arms. The preservation of the individual right to keep and bear arms is a bipartisan issue. If you really wish to get rid of guns, then push to amend the Constitution rather than undermine it with dubious local laws pushed by vapid celebrities.

FANTASY QBs TO WAIT ON

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, LIVING THE FANTASY

NFL news

NFL offenses are going to the no-huddle more and more and the Packers want in on the trend. Coach Mike McCarthy said he wants to get off 75 plays per game. Upgrade the whole offense.

If position requirements didn't exist in fantasy football, we'd gobble up all the quarterbacks we could and laugh all the way to the bank.

But they do, and most leagues require we start only one quarterback. Given that they're the most consistent statistical producers, the most healthy and have the most positional depth in today's pass-happy NFL, it's a no-brainer to stock up on running backs and wideouts while waiting on your quarterback. Of course, this only works if the QBs we're waiting for produce at a top-12 clip. Here are the signal callers the "Wait on QB" purists should be targeting this year.

Cut me, Jay

Last season, Bears quarterbacks totaled 4,450 passing yards, 32 touchdowns and 19 interceptions — numbers good enough for a QB5 fantasy ranking. Credit passing-game savant Marc Trestman, whose scheme was so dominant journeyman Josh McCown became a stud. Now it's Jay Cutler's turn to go off, as his superior arm talent is a perfect fit for the basketball-on-grass receiving trio of Brandon Marshall, Alshon Jeffery and Martellus Bennett. Cutler's Yahoo! average draft position (ADP) is currently 104.9, the 15th quarterback off the board. It's robbery.

Cutler will be in his second year under offensive guru head coach Marc Trestman. / GETTY IMAGES

Iceman cometh

Matt Ryan has thrown for at least 4,000 yards and 26 touchdowns in three straight seasons, yet he can be had in the seventh round of fantasy drafts. It's a reminder of the mind-boggling depth at the position. Ryan has a chance at his best year yet, thanks largely to the healthy return of Julio Jones and Roddy White, and a running game that remains inept.

MLB pickups

Grab these guys off the waiver wire now:

- Dexter Fowler, OF, Astros — He's just about ready to come off the DL. Fowler is a five-category contributor, something hard to find on the wire.
- Jimmy Nelson, SP, Brewers — Don't give up on one of baseball's top prospects just because he got shelled in his first MLB start.

Midseason MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Athletics (59-36)

The Athletics left little doubt they are the best team in baseball at the All-Star break, winning seven of their last 10. They had two participants in the Home Run Derby in Yoenis Cespedes (who won for the second-straight year) and Josh Donaldson, who have played major roles in the A's second highest-scoring offense in the AL. They also have a major league-leading plus-145 run differential.

No. 2

Angels (57-37)

The hottest team in baseball may very well be the Angels at the moment as they have won five straight and nine of their last 10 games.

No. 3

Dodgers (54-43)

Los Angeles' rotation has paced them all year as Clayton Kershaw's 11 wins are tied for third in the NL and Josh Beckett's 2.26 ERA also ranks third.

No. 4

Brewers (30-22)

Things aren't going well for the Brewers as they have dropped eight of their last 10 games and lead the NL Central by one.

No. 5

Tigers (53-38)

Following a sluggish start, the Tigers have been playing like the defending AL runner-ups of late as they have opened an 8 1/2-game lead on the Royals.

No. 6

Cardinals (52-44)

Starter Adam Wainwright and his league-leading 12 wins and league-low 1.83 ERA has paved the way for him to start for the NL in the All-Star Game.

No. 7

Orioles (52-42)

Baltimore closed out the unofficial first half of the season strong to open up a four-game lead in the American League East.

No. 8

Giants (52-43)

Not only will the Giants be in the running for the NL West crown, but they will also be serious players for the NL wild-card during the second half.

No. 9

Mariners (51-44)

The Mariners have been led by ace Felix Hernandez and his AL-leading 2.12 ERA, which earned him the starting nod for the AL in Tuesday's All-Star Game.

No. 10

Reds (51-44)

Despite being injured, ace hurler Johnny Cueto is fifth in the NL in wins with 10 and is second in ERA at 2.13.

No. 11

Nationals (51-42)

They are tied with the Braves in the NL East, but do they have the experience to stay there when it matters most in September?

No. 12

Braves (52-43)

Aside from getting tremendous starting pitching, Atlanta's bullpen has been rock solid, led by Craig Kimbrel and his 29 saves.

No. 13

Pirates (49-46)

Andrew McCutchen had a very productive first half, hitting .324 with 17 home runs and 61 RBIs. The Bucs are 3 1/2 games out.

No. 14

Blue Jays (49-47)

Following the injury to slugger Edwin Encarnación, Toronto has fallen out of first place in the AL East and trail the Orioles by four games.

No. 15

Yankees (47-47)

New York took a real blow this week when it was learned rookie Masahiro Tanaka has a partially torn ulnar collateral ligament in his pitching elbow.

No. 16

Indians (47-47)

Only 7 1/2 games back in the division means Cleveland isn't out of it yet, but the Tribe will need to get things going quickly.

Comeback trail

Yankees open with long home stand

Yankees players will return from their short break for a home stand in the Bronx beginning with an interleague matchup against the Reds on Friday.

New York (47-47) will play 10 straight home games — after three against the Reds the Yankees meet the Rangers for four and Blue Jays for three — to kick off the second half of the season.

David Phelps will start on Friday as the Yankees have just one starter from their opening roster (Hiroki Kuroda) left in the rotation. METRO

BRANDON MCCARTHY WILL MAKE HIS SECOND YANKEE START ON SATURDAY.

GETTY IMAGES

Buyer or seller?

Mets ride hot streak into second half

A 10-game road trip to start the second half will likely determine whether the Mets decide to be sellers at the trade deadline.

The Mets (45-50) finished the first half winners of eight of 10, but will travel to the West Coast to face San Diego, Seattle and Milwaukee in a crucial set of games.

New York is currently seven games back in the NL East and wild card. If they do fall further behind, they could decide to deal veterans like Bartolo Colon or Daisuke Matsuzaka. METRO

By the numbers

The Mets wil have to go 45-22 (.671) over the final 67 games of the season if they are to reach the 90-win threshold general manager Sandy Alderson said he was targeting at the start of the 2014 season.
